John Arquilla, a professor of defense analysis at the Naval Postgraduate School and noted author, will be featured in a special on Afghanistan that airs this Friday evening on The Learning Channel.

The program, "Afghanistan: America's New War," will air Friday evening at 9 p.m. The Learning Channel has posted the following synopsis of the program: "Using a combination of high-tech air weapons and highly trained operatives on the ground, the United States was able to topple the Taliban regime. Follow the American Special Operations forces who have been the lynchpin of the war in Afghanistan."

Business 2.0 magazine referred to Arquilla as "America's Secret Weapon" in an in-depth cover story in its December 2001 issue. The full text of the article by Tom Stewart is available at HYPERLINK

Many of Arquilla's publications -- such as his most recent book Networks and Netwars: The Future of Terror, Crime, and Militancy -- can be downloaded at no cost from the

RAND Corporation web site (see HYPERLINK
