RESUME OF STEPHEN LOUIS MEHAY

Stephen Mehay was born in Indianapolis, Indiana on 4 July 1943. He attended the University of Detroit and Indiana University, where he majored in economics. He received the Bachelor of Arts in 1965. He attended the University of Illinois, Champaign-Urbana, receiving an M.A. in labor economics in 1967. In 1973 he received his Ph.D. in economics from UCLA specializing in public finance, microeconomics, and labor economics. As a graduate student he was a research associate at the Institute of Government and Public Affairs at UCLA and co-authored a book on program budgeting and cost-benefit analysis.

Upon completion of his Ph.D. he has worked as a research economist for the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia, and for the Institute of Government and Public Affairs at UCLA on various research projects. He has served as a consultant to various organizations, including General Research Corporation, the Office of Planning and Research of the State of California, the U.S. Department of Justice, and the Solicitor General of Canada.

His academic employment has included faculty positions at the University of Oregon, Sir George Williams University in Montreal, Canada, and San Jose State University.

He joined the faculty of the Naval Postgraduate School in July 1984 as an adjunct teaching professor. In Winter 1985 he worked as an adjunct research professor, and in June 1985 joined the Administrative Sciences Department as an Associate Professor of Labor Economics. His teaching areas include economics, intermediate and managerial economics, and manpower economics. His research interests have been in public choice, public finance and labor economics and he has published numerous journal articles. His current research involves analyzing local labor market potential for military recruiting, especially for the reserve forces.

He is a member of the American Economic Association, the Western Economic Association, the Public Choice Society, the Western Regional Science Association, and the Atlantic Economics Society.
