Excerpts from Ted Sarbin's Obituary (NY Times, 7 September 2005)

Theodore R. Sarbin, a prominent social psychologist who in 1988 helped write a controversial Pentagon report recommending that the United States military end discrimination against gay men and lesbians, died on Aug. 31 at his home in Carmel, Calif. He was 94.

Dr. Sarbin's report was prepared for the Defense Personnel Security Research and Education Center, at the time a Navy program. Completed in late 1988, the report was publicly rejected by the Pentagon after it was leaked to the news media the next year by members of Congress sympathetic to the cause of gay men and lesbians in the military. The report was written with Kenneth E. Karols, a Navy psychiatrist and surgeon.

From 1987 until shortly before his death, Dr. Sarbin was a research psychologist at the Defense Personnel Security Research and Education Center, which is now part of the Department of Defense. Based in Monterey, Calif., the center was established in 1986 in the wake of the discovery of a Navy spy ring. It studies human behavior as it relates to national security.

Dr. Sarbin's report was originally commissioned to examine the security risks posed by gay men and lesbians in the military. In the finished report, "Nonconforming Sexual Orientations and Military Suitability," he and Dr. Karols concluded that gay men and lesbians posed no greater risk than heterosexuals did. They recommended that the Pentagon rethink its policy barring them from service.

"Having a same-gender or an opposite-gender orientation is unrelated to job performance in the same way as being left- or right-handed," they wrote.

On The Floor of the U.S. House of Representatives

"Ted was perhaps best known for pioneering work he did on the subject of gays in the military. . . . The Report's publication propelled Ted into the spotlight. However, despite its notoriety, the "Gays in Uniform" report simply reflected the theme of Ted's life work: Listen to others and refrain from judgment in reporting the facts."

"In Honor of Ted Sarbin," Honorable Sam Farr (CA), U.S. House of Representatives, 7 October 2005

Results from 5 Surveys of Officers at NPS, 1994-2010

The first NPS-DADT Survey was administered in 1994. The very same survey, with minor modifications, was administered in 1996, 1999, 2004, and 2010.

These surveys are unique within DoD, and they trace the entire history of DADT.

How Has the Repeal of DADT Affected Morale in the Navy/Marine Corps?

How Has the Repeal of DADT Affected Unit Cohesion in the Navy/Marine Corps?

What Do YOU Think?

What conclusions do you draw from the results?

Selected Conclusions

- Navy/MC officers at NPS currently share many of same views as in society
 - > Trends are similar, toward increasing acceptance of gays generally
 - > Views among Navy/MC officers – and especially among Marines – seem less positive in having gays serve openly in military
 - > Movement toward accepting gays in military is clear and strong over past 17 years; much more in recent years
- Why the trend toward acceptance?
 - > Contact hypothesis (and nature/location/proximity)
 - > “Catching up” with society
 - > Generational effects
 - > Other factors (e.g., dealing with inevitable change)

- Differences between officers in Navy and Marine Corps
 - > Similar directional trends, but slower among Marines
 - > The intensity of views (i.e., strongly agree or strongly disagree) is greater among Navy officers
 - > Marines appear less comfortable, personally & operationally, with prospective changes – but professional in adapting
- No major problems or issues apparent here after the repeal of DADT
- Longer-range prospects appear positive, given history of adaptability to change in the US military (and in the militaries of 20+ other nations)

U.S. Navy Officers' Attitudes on the Repeal of “Don't Ask, Don't Tell”

LT Ryan Appleman &
LTJG Pete McLaughlin

Advisors: Prof. Mark Eitelberg &
Prof. Frank Barrett

ABSTRACT

“Don’t Ask, Don’t Tell” (DADT) prohibited gays from serving openly in the military from December 1993 to September 2011. In February 1994, a survey of Navy officers was administered at the Naval Postgraduate School exploring attitudes toward DADT. This survey was re-administered in 1996, 1999, 2004, and 2010. The surveys revealed an increasing acceptance of gays in the Navy. The present study, conducted post-repeal, utilized the same NPS survey along with focus-group interviews to examine the following: policy, cohesion, leadership, tolerance, unit effectiveness, and military environment. The results show that the trend toward increasing acceptance has continued, as a majority of Navy officers strongly support the service of homosexuals. At the same time, a number of officers claim to feel uncomfortable sharing living quarters with a homosexual. Differences in attitudes were found by rank and years of service. It is recommended that the study be continued and expanded to include a more representative population of Navy officers and enlisted personnel. Further, the post-repeal effects on readiness should be monitored, particularly for fairness and potential harassment. The thesis includes appendices with survey trend data from 1994 to 2012 and response frequencies from a concurrent survey of Marine Corps officers. (March 2013)

Research Questions

How have Navy officers' attitudes on gays in the military changed:

- since 1993?
- since the repeal of DADT?

What are Navy officers' impressions regarding the effects of repeal on fleet readiness?

- Qualitative study:
 - 59-question survey administered over a two-week period
 - Four focus-group interview sessions

Survey Requests Sent Out	Respondents	Skipped Questions	Total	Response Rate
573	334	24	358	62.5%

Trend Analysis of Navy Officer Attitudes: Policy

18. The current policy is good for national defense.

33. On the whole, I like the current policy better than the old policy.

Trend Analysis of Navy Officer Attitudes: Leadership

7. I would have no difficulty working for a homosexual Commanding Officer.

21. A division officer's sexual preference has no effect on the officer's ability to lead.

Trend Analysis of Navy Officer Attitudes: Comfort and Habitability

3. I would prefer not to have homosexuals in my command.

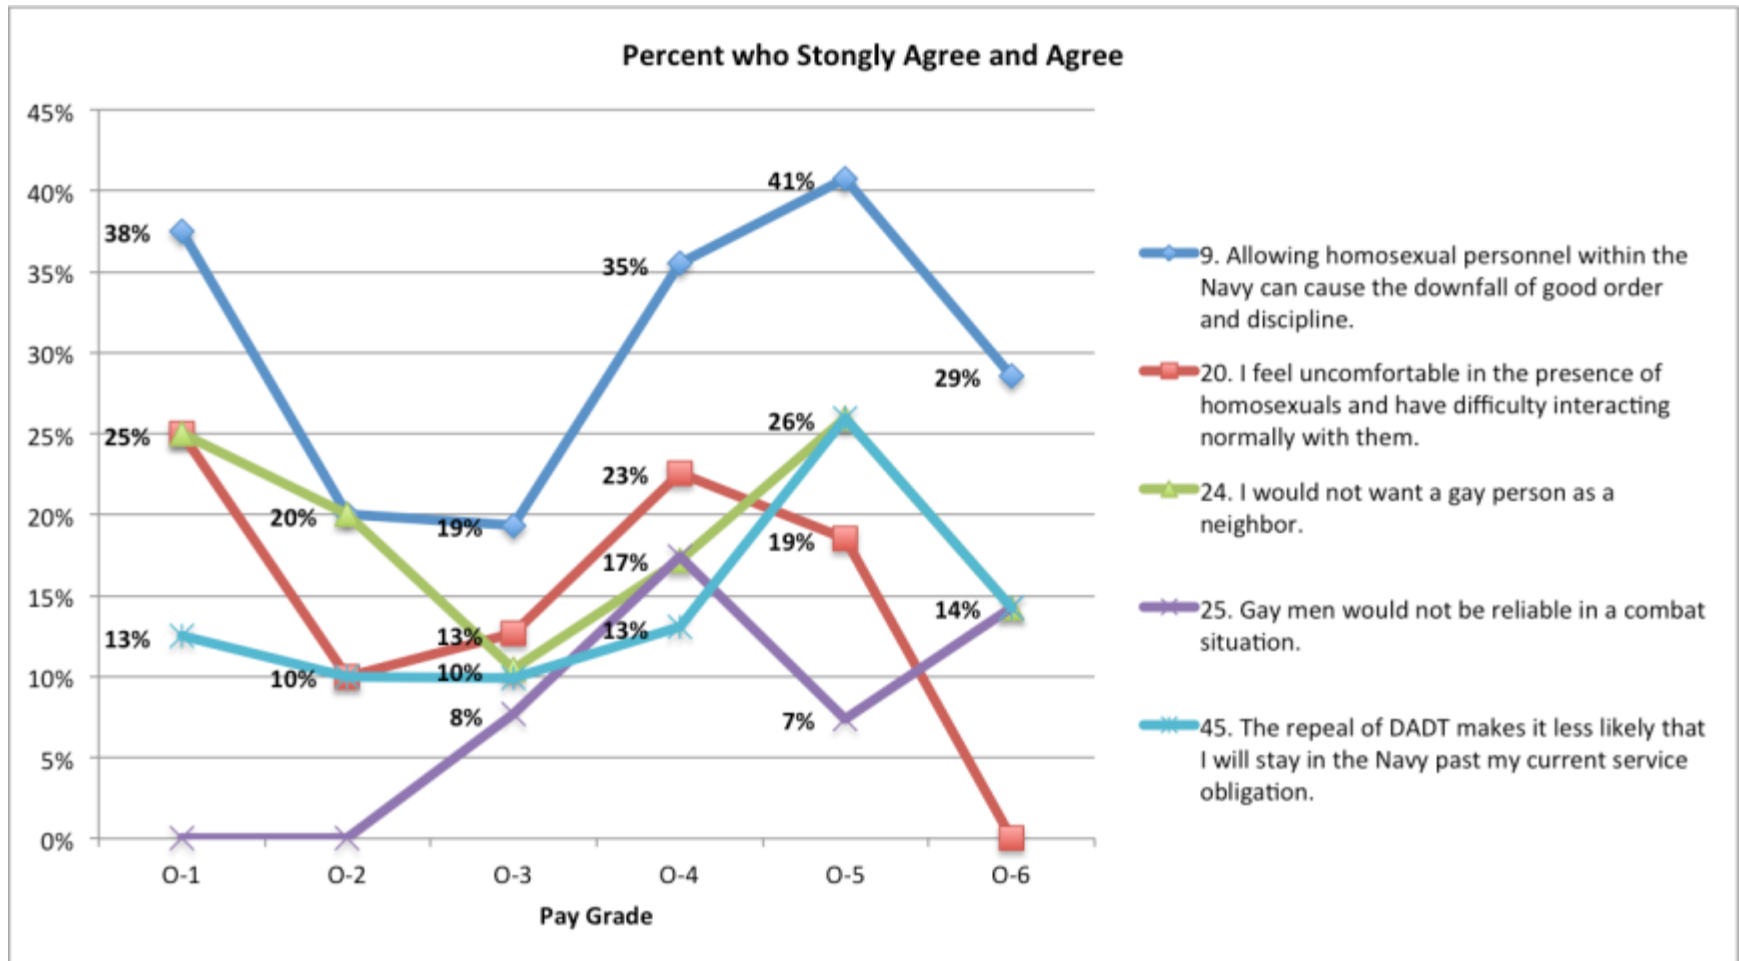

20. I feel uncomfortable in the presence of homosexuals and have difficulty interacting normally with them.

Results

Trend Analysis by Demographic Group: Pay Grade

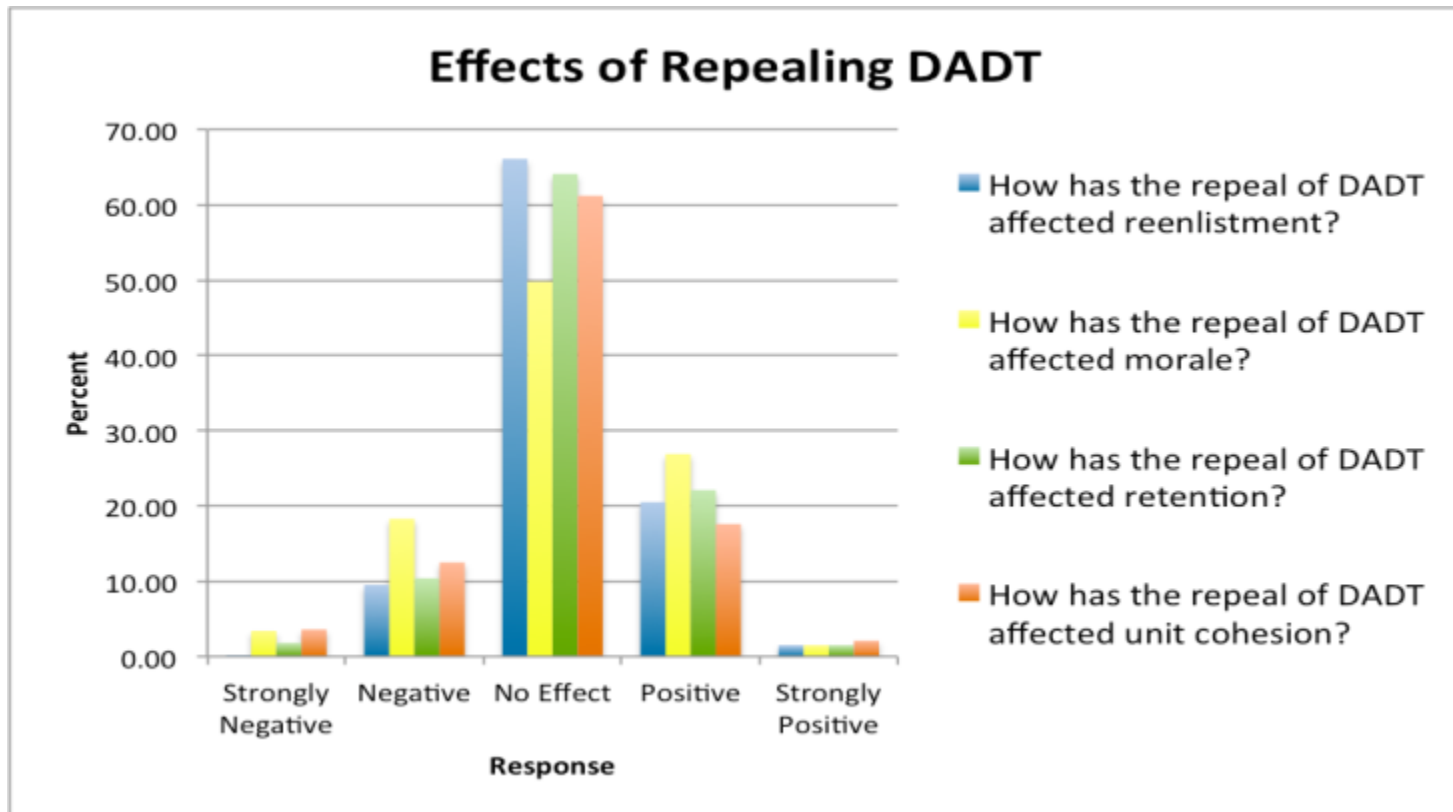

- Major Themes from Focus Groups
 - No adverse effect of repeal on unit cohesion
 - No adverse effect of repeal on morale
 - No adverse effect of repeal on readiness
 - Leadership and professionalism matter
 - Life goes on; mission prevails
 - “Don’t ask, Don’t Tell, Don’t Care”

Data Analysis: Conclusions

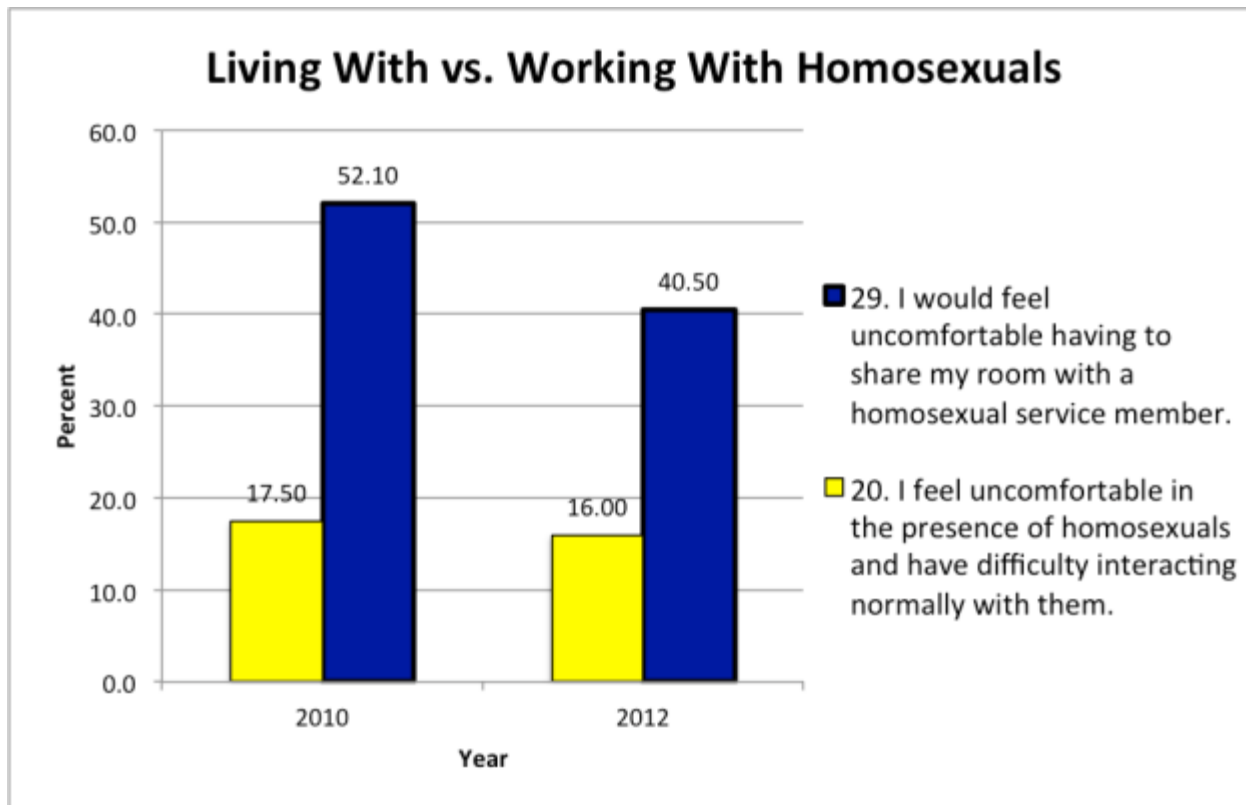

- Views have shifted dramatically since 1994 from strongly negative to strongly positive toward repeal of DADT and homosexuals serving openly in the military

Data Analysis: Conclusions

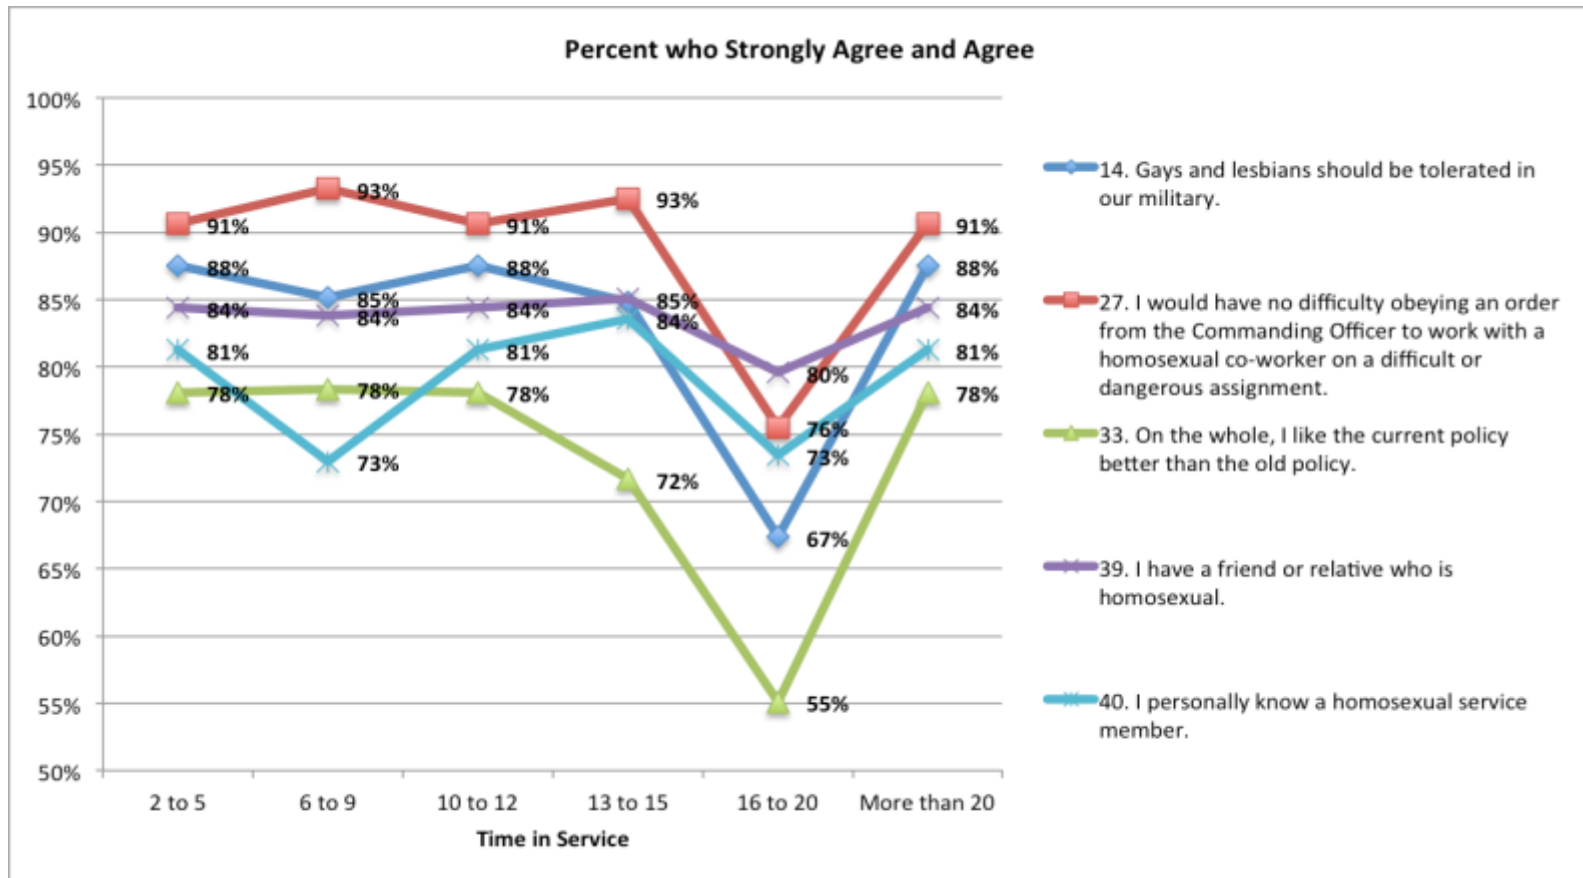

- A vast majority of Navy officers say they have no difficulty serving with homosexuals, even though a number claim to feel uncomfortable sharing living quarters with a homosexual

Data Analysis: Conclusions

- Higher-ranking officers and officers with 16-20 YOS are less tolerant than other YOS groups

ABSTRACT

“Don’t Ask, Don’t Tell” (DADT) prohibited gays from serving openly in the military from December 1993 to September 2011. The present study, conducted over one year after DADT’s repeal, utilized a survey of attitudes toward DADT that was previously administered to Marine Corps officers at the Naval Postgraduate School (NPS) in 1999, 2004, and 2010. This survey, re-administered to NPS Marine officers in November 2012, addressed the following areas: policy, cohesion, leadership, tolerance, unit effectiveness, and military readiness. A comparison of results from the four surveys shows a clear trend of increasing acceptance toward homosexuals in the military. Levels of acceptance tended to vary by Military Occupational Specialty and length of service. Additionally, many Marine officers continued to express concern about habitability and personal comfort. These and other issues were further explored with Marine officers in three focus-group sessions. Overall, study results indicated strong agreement that the current policy protects the rights of all Marines, regardless of sexual orientation. Finally, Marine officers expressed confidence that the training they received adequately prepared them to execute the repeal of DADT. The thesis includes appendices with survey trend data from 1999 to 2012 and response frequencies from a concurrent survey of Navy officers. (Published March 2013)
