

Calhoun: The NPS Institutional Archive
DSpace Repository

NPS Scholarship

Publications

2012-04-06

Malawi on edge as the "warm heart" mourns as the head of state

Dearing, Matthew P.

Small Wars Journal

Small Wars Journal: Journal Article, April 6, 2012, 12:15pm
<https://hdl.handle.net/10945/47529>

This publication is a work of the U.S. Government as defined in Title 17, United States Code, Section 101. Copyright protection is not available for this work in the United States.

Downloaded from NPS Archive: Calhoun

Calhoun is the Naval Postgraduate School's public access digital repository for research materials and institutional publications created by the NPS community. Calhoun is named for Professor of Mathematics Guy K. Calhoun, NPS's first appointed -- and published -- scholarly author.

Dudley Knox Library / Naval Postgraduate School
411 Dyer Road / 1 University Circle
Monterey, California USA 93943

<http://www.nps.edu/library>

SMALL WARS

JOURNAL

Malawi on Edge as the 'Warm Heart' Mourns the Head of State

By Matthew P. Dearing

Journal Article | Apr 6 2012 - 12:15pm

On April 5th, the Malawi Head of State, President Bingu wa Mutharika, 78, died at Kamuzu Central Hospital of cardiac arrest. While initial reports claim his body was flown to South Africa as a “formality,” it is likely senior members of the Cabinet and ruling party are buying time to manipulate the succession process before making an official announcement. Given the complexity of personalities and polarity within the Cabinet, Malawi faces a period of political uncertainty and the potential for sporadic instability.

Panic and uncertainty is escalating in the small east-African nation that has seen little violence since the 1964 independence. The latest spate of violence was in July 2011, when police killed 20 anti-government protestors. On Thursday, police were deployed throughout Lilongwe and 15 soldiers were placed outside Vice-President Joyce Banda’s residence. It is not clear whether they are there to secure the VP residence or to prevent Banda from leaving – essentially placing her under house arrest.

According to the Constitution, First Vice-President Joyce Banda will take over as the new head of state. However, her swearing in will likely occur under great turmoil. In 2010, Mutharika sacked her from the ruling Democratic People’s Party (DPP) based on disagreements over the 2014 election. Mutharika arranged to position his brother Peter, the nation’s foreign minister as the DPP presidential candidate in 2014. Adding to the Cabinet complexities, Joyce Banda remained as vice-president since it is an elected position. Banda subsequently created her own People’s Party to compete in parliament. If sworn in, she will be the first female head of state in Malawi. However, sources claim that a meeting is to be held next week by senior members of the cabinet to change the constitution so that the speaker of the Parliament, Henry Chimunthu Banda becomes President. This would present a detrimental Constitutional crisis that could drive the impoverished nation into further disarray.

The passing of Mutharika brings an already ambiguous future into doubt. Mutharika made critical economic and foreign policy blunders and turned increasingly erratic over his tenure. In April 2011, Mutharika booted the UK High Commissioner, Fergus Cochrane-Dyet, from Malawi after accusations of autocracy and intolerance were leaked from diplomatic cables. Mutharika cursed foreign donor nations this year, telling them to “go to hell.” In response to the violent government crackdowns in July, the US cut a $350 million aid package set to rebuild a power grid.

The end of Mutharika’s era offers significant opportunities to rebuild relations with foreign donors. Joyce Banda, with a strong record of supporting the constitution and human rights, stands outside the dirty politics within DPP and could offer a fig leaf to donors tired of corruption and implacable leadership.

However, the powerful DPP stands in her way. While Banda’s inauguration would be historic and opportunistic for change, it will likely be stifled by individuals in the DPP fearful of losing their grip on power.

About the Author

Matthew P. Dearing

Matthew P. Dearing is a research associate completing a PhD in the National Security Affairs Department at the Naval Postgraduate School. His dissertation focuses on the variation of paramilitary groups in Afghanistan. He is a prior-service Marine with a BA from UC Berkeley and MA from the Naval Postgraduate School. His interests have taken him throughout Afghanistan, Belarus, the Democratic Republic of Congo, and Malawi.

Available online at : <http://smallwarsjournal.com/jrnl/art/malawi-on-edge-as-the-%E2%80%9Cwarm-heart%E2%80%9D-mourns-the-head-of-state>

Links:

{1} <http://smallwarsjournal.com/author/matthew-p-dearing>

{2} <http://smallwarsjournal.com/comment/reply/12473#comment-form>

Copyright © 2015, Small Wars Foundation.

Select uses allowed by Creative Commons BY-NC-SA 3.0 license per our Terms of Use.
Please help us support the Small Wars Community.